Spaces in Time: A Life in Architecture, the latest book by Architect, Ramu Katakam traces his journey through the seventy years of his life as an architect, taking us through the places and edifices he designed, built and lived for, delving into the events that shaped his country and him post-Independence, and through the people who accompanied him along the way. In this memoir, Ramu Katakam shares the 'prana' that has influenced his work and continues to inspire him. Architect, Ramu Katakam has been practicing in India since 1977. Initially based in Delhi, he moved to Bangalore in 1997. His practice includes hotels, libraries, schools and religious buildings that have been built in all parts of India. Projects have included housing in Bhuj, in the western deserts of the country, to a hotel in Kohima in the eastern most part.
