CREATING OTHER WORLDS

Remembering Spanish architect Ricardo Bofill, whose buildings became pop icons with their unsettling and otherworldly combinations.

Spanish architect and founder of Taller de Arquitectura, Ricardo Bofill died on 14, January, 2022 at the age of 82. Ricardo Bofill was born on December 5th, 1939 in Barcelona into a prominent Catalan family. His father, Emilio Bofill, was an architect and developer. His mother, Maria Levi, was a Venetian who became an arts patron in Barcelona. He had gathered a multidisciplinary, multitalented group in order to confront the complexity of architectural practice, architects, engineers, planners, sociologists, writers, movie makers and philosophers. He studied architecture at the Barcelona School of Architecture, a center from which he was expelled in 1957 for his political activism. He subsequently graduated in Urbanism and Architecture at the Haute Ecole du Paysage, d 'Ingenierieet d' Architecture in Geneva, Switzerland. In 1960, he designed a summer house for a relative on the island of Ibiza, a modest stucco building that did seem close to nature.
