PROJECT

BUCOLIC SERENITY

Mountain Dust, a country home designed by Architect Mahesh Naik is based on a squarish and triangular grid, forming a Triskelion geometrical system balanced by the landscape's circular geometry

The idea was to stitch the house (the Man) with the three attributes- the huge towering mountain, the sun rising, and the moon. This led to a sacred knot - a Triskelion geometry for the house. This geometrical system gives the house more surface area, giving a maximum 360-degree view of the surrounding mountains. The dwelling serves as a country home for Mr. Alreja and his family, who primarily live in Mumbai. The 20-acre site is situated at the foothill of Matheran Hills. The site drops 110 feet from the top of the drive to the water edge. This countryside farmhouse consists of a six- -bedded house, surrounded by a common retro, glamping area, swimming pool, service block, staff quarters, water reservoir, a large meadow, sacred groove, and wild, untouched woods on the clift till the river edge.
